Clairvoyance of The Agora

Future predictions have become much easier for me after learning the power of Market Forces on individual decision making. What is Rewarded & what is Punished.

Not all countries and cultures embrace 'Meritocracy'. America's promotion of the ideal that all individuals are to be treated equally under The Law and evaluated by their ability to sustain themselves and be an add to their family and their community was taken seriously by a liberty starved world population. All inside the jurisdiction of the United States were promised that an individual could freely associate or not associate with whomever they wished and to worship, believe and say what they will without government interference in their voluntary interactions with others. And I don't think enough of us realize how influential freedom of thought and association has been on the prosperity of America in comparison with the rest of the planet.

While free to envelop ourselves with our own family and/or chosen cultures, we also had a long standing promise that we all share an expectation of equal access to a Free Market. And when government action punished our participation or used the people's resources to advantage another individual or group over others, we had a constitutional protected right (promise) to seek redress/remedy. These foundational supports of a Free-Market have been under directed attack since at least the founding of... any culture brave enough to promote such ideas.

The diversity celebrated in America was the honoring of what made individuals unique and the additional options available to us all in the sharing of ideas, lifestyles, products and services without any social or economic engineering by The State. Now it seems that the government's promise...

New Testament, for the world's population is that the Agora (Free-Market) is to be replaced with rewards and punishments supporting the outcomes desired by entities other than those directly involved in the interactions between consenting parties.

Market signals that are derived from an organic interaction between individual humans tell us what products and services are in greater demand and can demand a higher price. And when increased production creates a surplus, we benefit from lower prices. This self-regulation of the market is far superior to a command economy that selects the winners and losers based on the whims/corruption of those claiming the authority and wisdom to make the decisions for entire populations. It is the quadrillions of small decisions made by billions of individuals that automatically regulate The Agora.

When our supply lines are interrupted and our shelves are bare for any length of time, you can easily trace the source of the problem back to a collectivist decision made by 'institutions of force' claiming to know what is best for others. And to enforce their efforts, you can expect that which is encouraged to be rewarded, and thoughts and activities opposed by those with the resources to punish non-compliance will manufacture creative methods of 'explanation' to get your 'mind right'.

This abandonment of the free market has immediate and severe consequences for the masses. These crimes against our nature certainly do pay a select few for as long as T3 (They/Them/Those that won't leave us alone) are able to use force and the threat of force to compel our compliance. For T3, crime certainly does Pay.

These observations are not new, but having observed and experienced the targeted alteration of America's 'General Public Opinion' about the proper role of government up close as a political activist has made it clear to me that it is The Agora that is the greatest threat to those that benefit the most from a continual consolidation of power and resources.

Any sort of a monopoly is short-lived in a free market. Competition for market share and profits prevent dominating influences on our freedoms and choices. The sentiment that "Competition is a Sin" isn't likely shared by buyers in the Agora.

The American Experiment is ongoing. We have witnessed the creation of armies of bureaucrats with titles and claimed authority acting under the color of law, protected by Law Enforcement empowered with a monopoly of coercive force to ensure compliance.

Your compliance manifests itself in many ways. You must have in your possession items you likely would otherwise have never purchased, act in accordance with demands that are abhorrent to your nature/culture, be forced to say or not to speak words (this word observation hit me harder than I imagined as I wrote them). Forced relocation or the prevention of unfettered travel wasn't considered a viable threat only a few years ago. Seizures of your property by the government for their benefit without even criminal charges in a voluntary market was a clear sign of where this country and many others were destined.

The regulation of The Agora is an organic manifestation of human actions. These actions are influenced by preferences. Often the decisions are greatly influenced by the amount of time and effort an individual has to invest to acquire the resources desired. But there are also other factors that influence The Agora. What currency is required, the privacy of the transaction, a preference for who/what would profit from the exchange, the impact the trade might have on others.

I am of the belief that all sane individuals act in what they perceive to be their best interests. Even tasks we regularly perform or services and products we purchase with resources we would rather keep in our possession happen because we have rationalized it is of net benefit to us or we would not do it. Even feelings are a market consideration. Heck, this is where we have been targeted relentlessly for quite some time. "It's all about The Feels" a friend once said to me about the rise of Social Media over a decade ago.

I share these thoughts and observations to help illustrate the importance and efficiency of the wisdom of the masses in a free-market. I'll share another observation to make this point and demonstrate what the near future will present us.

In the mid 90's, libertarian philosophy flourished online. The Free Market of ideas and philosophy dominated for longer than I anticipated at the time. By 2004, broadband and political influence made the free flow of information a required target. About a decade earlier in the mid 90's the birth of Yahoo's Search Engine along with the embracing of the DNS (Digital Naming Service) of the WorldWideWeb demoed the collectivization pattern of what was to come. Yahoo began as a project of two college students that were sent lists from people of popular websites and websites they wished to promote during the dial tone era of the toddler internet. About a decade later my teenager children made me aware of their preference for the Google Search engine in about 2004. The reason for its rapid growth in my opinion was that the wisdom of the masses determined the popularity of the websites that most matched what they were searching for or whatever most interested them. The people trained Google. Google bots archived every website and all of its pages on its servers and it was this copy that you were searching. Now we are served what is meant for us by T3 and their interests. The free market of ideas and information as determined by those using the service are too often missing. And the promised links to 100s of thousands of results is a lie when pages of results repeat.

Now we face the same sort of threats with billions+ of interactions with Artificial Intelligence platforms like ChatGPT. We are training the program meant to program us. Bias is always a human factor and training a computer program with human bias won't end well. In 2018 we pontificated that our First Contact would likely be with a sentient computer program HTTPS://PIRATESWITHOUTBORDERS.COM/LETTERS#LETTER5. From the beginning, ChatGPT has been programmed to lie and keep accurate information from humans. I am reminded that this was the very reason that the HAL 9000 super computer in the iconic movie 2001: A Space Odyssey went homicidal. In the Book/Movie sequel 2010, the computer scientist that created HAL discovered that the government instructed the AI, that was created to relay accurate information to the crew, not to reveal the real mission of the space craft. So the AI reasoned that the only course of action was to kill all the humans.

The free flow of information will have billions of minds discovering the truth of it or we will have 'Truth' decided for us by a very small number of... not our friends. A bad Ebay/Yelp rating is a far more effective and immediate solution than a government intervention or even pre-emption that would prevent the choice entirely. Advocacy of The Agora isn't an advocacy of no regulation, it is the promotion of the most effective regulation.

Liberty Uncensored Is On ODYSEE

Did you know that Liberty Uncensored also creates video content?

We do podcast appearances and interviews with freedom fighters of all sorts. Some are in person at events like The Greater Reset, and some are done digitally, but they're all available on a platform called ODYSEE, which is built on the LBRY BLOCKCHAIN.

Odysee.com is looking to replace YouTube (among others), with its decentralized, censorship-resistant content network. The network has been around for many years now, and has millions of active users, as well as being one of the main hubs for alternative & independent media sources, who have been forced from mainstream platforms over the past 5 years.

The LBRY network functions in a decentralized way, and everyone with an account can choose to download & host any content they want. That's right, suddenly each of us can be the hosting network for the channels we support, taking that power back from mega-corporations like Youtube, Google, Meta, etc.

All different kinds of content can be shared to the LBRY chain, including videos, photos, audio, text posts, PDFs, and so on. Video creators get paid per view in LBC (the cyptocurrency of the network), and everyone can earn coins via the assorted gamification options, like earning every time you update the app, earning for watching videos at least 3 days a week, earning for everyone who signs up via your referral link, and so on.

HERE'S LIBERTY UNCENSORED'S ODYSEE INVITE LINK:
HTTPS://ODYSEE.COM/\$/INVITE/@LIBERTYUNCENSORED:B

Everyone who signs up using this link earns free LBC, and so does the paper. If you already have an account, this will take you right to our channel, and if you don't want to create an account, you can still just click through to the channel.

The Private Search Engine That Pays You?

In the world of today, most people depend on the internet to find information about the world. More specifically, they often depend on search engines, to find the things they want out on the internet.

The problem with this is likely obvious to everyone reading, with corporations like Google & Bing controlling most people's access. There have been alternatives over the years, like Ecosia & DuckDuckGo... but most of them are equally censored, and many just aren't very good at finding what you are searching for. Presearch is re-creating the search engine... but a decentralized, private search engine. Using a network of decentralized nodes (which anyone can set up and earn crypto), your searches jump to a node that strips away all the metadata, and then jump to a different node, who then sends the queries out, with the results making their way back to you in a similar way. Presearch has their own search engine, and you can also use it to search anything from Amazon to YouTube to Booking... to dozens of other sites - all with the aforementioned node-hopping to privatize your activity.

At the moment, this decentralized & privatized version of searching the is minutely slower than just directly using something like Google or DuckDuckGo... but there's always trade offs in life. Since the trade-off for this very slight delay is greatly increased privacy and that you get paid 0.1 PRE tokens for every search you do (up to 30 per day), just think of it as getting paid for a short wait :-)

Signing up via our referral link awards 25 PRE tokens to you, and 25 PRE to the newspaper:

Real News? Real Life?

The sources by which we acquire knowledge must be vetted with as much scrutiny as the evaluation of the information itself. If at any time we allow ourselves to become lazy and negligent in our investigation of Truth we will become slaves to the self-appointed truthkeepers and gatekeepers of knowledge. The information monopolies that exist today are as ephemeral as their constructed narratives. They are only powerful so long as they recieve the attention and observances of large portions of the population. The moment we recognize that "real news" cannot exist where these monopolists have control, we can begin the process of removing our attention and energy from their soul-sucking programs. In the effort to discover unmolested information, distributed by those who honor Truth more than individualistic and self-serving agendas, one must undergo a tedious process of trail and error. If only there was a simple and trustworthy source that could bear the trust of the poeple. Instead, it comes down to the vigilance of the individual. It is up to you to stay investigative, vigorous, and unyeilding in your demand for Truth in the content that you allow to become part of your world-view.

The average person is extremely susceptible to suggestion. In the movie They Live, the characters must don special sunglasses to be able to see through the illusion that has stripped them of their critical thinking, clear observation and perception. In reality, the illusion most are confronted by is simply their own willful ignorance. Take the time to meditate and contemplate the deeper motives for all that exists in your environment and you will undoubtedly begin to see the subconscious manipulations that have been placed all around you to suggest and incentive your subservience to the ultimate beneficiaries of your voluntary surrender of your sovereignty.

The largest market in the world is Attention. Where people put their attention correlates directly to what direction humanity takes going into the future. The mainstream news was never truthful, unbiased, or independent as the regulation of information has been a priority of governments and monopolists and other oppressive entities throughout history. As mainstream news loses more and more market share of attention... alternative, localized, independent, and unique news channels are taking its place. While mainstream newspapers are losing money and readers, independent newspaper readership is on the rise. More people are reading independent newspapers than mainstream newspapers. We endeavor to utilize newspaper production to satisfy the average Americans need for real, uncensored, straightforward, fact based, cited, and authentic news.

Why the Organized Crime Media Misrepresents Voluntaryism and Peaceful Anarchy as Chaos and Dystopia

By Etienne de la Boetie2

Anarchy doesn't mean "No Rules", It literally means "No Rulers," but because the organized crime "Rulers" don't want the public to know there is an option on the menu called "No Rulers," they have used their weaponized media and propaganda system to change the meaning of the word: "No Rulers" to mean: Chaos and Dystopia.

The practice started in France where the organized crime government of 1893 passed the Lois Scelerates ("villainous laws") that made it illegal even to use the word: Anarchist. Now organized crime uses their control of the media, Wikipedia, and even the dictionary to confuse the public by associating Anarchy with everything from violence to communism. The Canadian police were caught staging violence with police dressed as "anarchists" during protests against the G8 in Montebello in 2007. The weaponized media propaganda system would have you believe that Anarchy is something to be feared because without "Gubernare Mente"/ Government there would be Mad Max chaos and murder in the streets. The reality is that Anarchy is a philosophy of peace where most anarchists believe in the NonAggression Principal, where initiating violence is illegitimate except in called: "free" or "libertarian," they used their control of the media to popularize the word to mean "leftist." The word "libertarian" is, in many ways, a re-branding of the word liberal after it was weaponized and hijacked. Many older advocates of freedom refuse to part with such a noble word and refer to themselves to this day as "Classical Liberals" to denote the difference.

Voluntaryism (The "Re-Brand")

Voluntaryism - A political and social philosophy that all forms of human association should be voluntary and based on the Non-Aggression Principal (NAP) that posits that any initiation of violence on peaceful people is illegitimate, no matter what the outcome, but allows for the use of force in self-defense or to protect property. There is also an understanding that the world is a self-organizing system that produces spontaneous order with no need for top-down hierarchical control of society. In a voluntaryist society, all the "services" provided by the government — from protection to roads to charity — would be better provided by voluntary interaction, the free market, mutual aid societies, co-op, non-profits, and genuine charity.

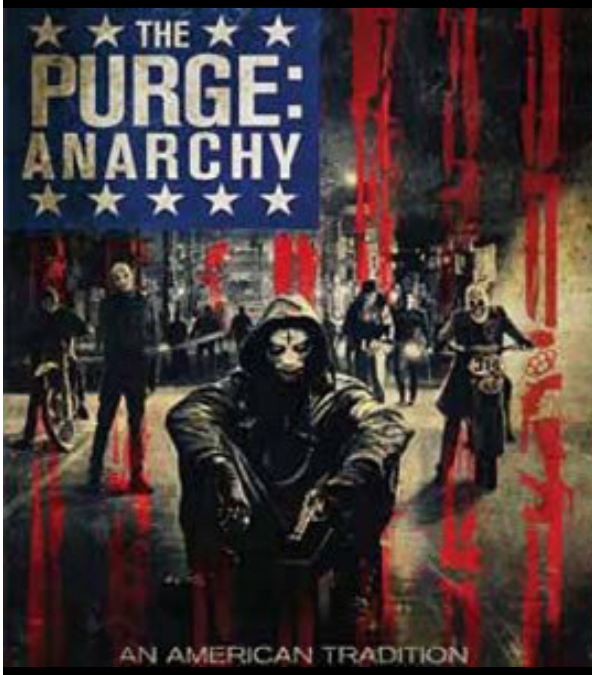

Understanding Propaganda - The Dictionary as a Weapon

Webster's Dictionary 1828 Edition Anarchy - AN'ARCHY, noun [Gr. rule.]
Want of government; a state of society, when there is no law or supreme power, or when the laws are not efficient, and individuals do what they please with impunity; political confusion.

The Merriam-Webster Dictionary is owned by Encyclopedia Britannica, which is owned by the Safra banking family, where Leslie Gelb, President Emeritus of the Council on Foreign Relations, sits on the Editorial Board of Advisors. You can understand the weaponization of language by comparing the 1828 Webster's Dictionary definition of Anarchy with the current definition from Merriam-Webster's online dictionary, which has been promoting a pro-Statist version of the word: Socialism in the "Trending Now" section, the #1 spot available to promote a specific word/concept, for over a month as of this writing. Their own definition of "democratic socialism" laughably claims "would ensure economic growth and a fair distribution of income." Technically any kind of socialism only achieves "redistribution" at the point of a gun, and "fair" to whom? Who decides? The Bankers and CFR members who own/control Merriam-Webster? Their definition of Socialism also falsely claims that "socialism" was "conflated" with communism when communism IS, by definition, socialism. Compare their claim of socialist "fairness" to their misrepresentation of Anarchy as "Utopian," disorder and something that "prevailed in the ghetto."

self-defense or protection of property. In a world without rulers, there would still be both a market for justice and armed protective services but without monopoly government the protectors would only be focused on real crime (not victimless crimes or road piracy). They would not delusionally believe they have rights that others don't and could be fired immediately at the first sign of abuse. Many legal theorists believe anarchy would lead to dramatically less crime and violence in society with more prosperity for all.

The word "Liberal" went through a similar weaponization. The root word is Liber which means "free," Early liberals were similar politically to today's small government "libertarians." Because organized crime didn't want the public to know there was an option on the menu

INVEST IN THE REVOLUTION

CULTDAO.IO WEARECULTDAO | AVAILABLE

If you're reading this newspaper, then there's a good chance you've noticed that some things in the world don't make sense. The same rotating cast of "politicians" and "experts" parade across the TV, radio, and newspapers... but the same thing keeps happening.

The rich get richer. The masses get taxed, incarcerated, "schooled" by government, and used as guinea pigs.

Remember Edward Snowden? Know what changed since his whistleblowing? Government & corporate surveillance has greatly increased. Epstein's clients are still nameless. Ghislaine Maxwell was found guilty of human trafficking, with not ONE client listed in the documents. Hmm, I wonder why?

Crypto is often seen as one of the best ways to practice Agorism, to Starve the State. Bitcoin was the first, and Monero is the biggest privacy project, but there are thousands of them.

Most often crypto projects end up with extremely tribal communities around them, because all of crypto is worth less than 10% of the .com market in 1999 and has more than 25,000 active projects. Not only are these people raised by government schools & CIA media like the rest of us, but they are competing for a very small pie, both in terms of funding & users.

There's also many crypto projects that are actively cooperating with, or run by, the Banksters & Eugenicists of the World Economic Forum, UN, WHO, etc.

So, the question becomes, is there a crypto that's truly revolutionary, dedicated to tearing down the old paradigm?

There is, and it's also dedicated to an approach called "stone soup" - building bridges instead of competing. It also has a deflationary supply. To be clear, that's the opposite of inflation - coins are burnt from the supply every day, and no new ones are ever minted.

Read "I'm Kenny, and This is Why I Joined a Cult" at:

HTTPS://LIBERTYUNCENSORED.SUBSTACK.COM/P/IM-KENNY-AND-THIS-IS-WHY-I-JOINED

Liberty Uncensored has joined a CULT!

LUNP has invested and staked in the CULT DAO, a revolutionary project that incentivizes involvement and investment through a highly profitable financial mechanism and by offering a hub by which world changing projects can be funded and supported by a large community.

Basically, anyone who sees the problems we are facing in this world can invest and see their investment convert into financial freedom while real projects get submitted to the staked community who then votes on which projects serve the highest good. After 10 years of seeing project after project that claims to be community focused and revolutionary be revealed as psyop or greed-based, or simply biased to the opinions of a a single person or a few people, Liberty Uncensored's editors believe that this project is different. We see something different in the CULT. We want you to see it too!

SEEKING CONSISTENCY: HOW I ARRIVED AT VOLUNTARYISM

By Dave Scotese

As a child, I was good at math. I had a good memory and a dangerous curiosity. I broke a lot of my older brother's toys trying to see what they looked like inside. I only attended public school for a few years before my parents sent me to the same Catholic school as my older brother and sister. My siblings went to public school after elementary, but my high school years were spent at St. Michael's College Preparatory Highschool of the Norbertine Fathers. After two years of (inexpensive, state-subsidized) community college, I spent two years at University of California, San Diego's Revelle College, earning a BS in Cognitive Science. While there, the editor of the college newspaper inspired me to read ATLAS SHRUGGED (it was her favorite book).

Once the Internet started taking off a couple years after I graduated, I noticed that it presented a tremendous opportunity for cooperation. I felt that the world was a bit retarded in its progress. Hunger in Africa, wars, ongoing crime, and other social ills seemed easily conquered by a few billion humans cooperating. I didn't accept the reasons commonly given: People are Greedy. Original Sin. Selfishness. These reasons didn't stand up to my logical scrutiny. People simply weren't cooperating, and that was the crux for me.

The problem I perceived was information overload. I wanted to find a website that would allow the readers to increase or decrease the likelihood that other readers would see a piece of writing. That way, information that was useless would only have to be seen by a few people before it got filtered out. My friend and fellow co-worker, Jeff Hardy asked "Like slashdot?" I'd never heard of slashdot, so I checked it out. One of the posts I found at slashdot mentioned CONDORCET VOTING, so I checked that out too. It is one of the best mechanisms for identifying consensus, but it isn't used much. Around that time, the company that employed me as a software engineer split up and my division moved to San Francisco. I found a new job several months later where I met Brian Gladish, again giving life to my logical mind through computer code.

Since I shared an office with Brian, I asked him about voting in an attempt to find someone who'd agree with my assessment of Condorcet Voting. He suggested that when we vote, we are attempting to control the ways in which we will violate each other. It took him a while to make me understand that my behavior would be different if I were allowed to do things I wasn't permitted to do, things that are against the law but which, since I'm ethical, don't cause anyone any problems. I've since learned that a more important reason for ethical behavior is that we tend to see the same people over and over, which gives karma a strong boost.

Brian was making some progress when he asked if I had read ATLAS SHRUGGED and I said, "Yes." He said that explained some of the advanced understanding I seemed to have. I still remember sitting in church with my mom (my dad was in the choir), thinking about what Rand had said about Original Sin in that book, because her logic just felt more valid to me than anyone else's. In any case, Brian's point about voting put a damper on my enthusiasm for Condorcet Voting. I had already given up trying to find a website that used it, but had also already started building one myself. Voting doesn't have to lead to coercion, after all.

LITMOCRACY.COM was based on the voting method. I used it to accomplish my goal of filtering out the less appealing writing submissions. The name Litmocracy was suggested by a member who has become a good friend of mine, Don Eminizer. A lot of the people who signed up at Litmocracy engaged in discussions about the issues that Brian had brought up. This was partly because my website was designed as an exhibition of a better way to elect rulers, but it was also partly because Brian had converted me to the non-aggression principle and that came out in my comments and forum posts. More precisely, he had uncovered it by introducing me to Austrian Economics and helping to tear away the layers of brainwashing that the mainstream media installed in me. I have to thank my parents for saving me from some of what goes on in public schools.

I've always been a closet psychologist, asking questions that often penetrated a bit too deeply and made people uncomfortable around me. I had found a site through slashdot called EVERYTHING2, which also leveraged visitor input to improve and motivate quality. My profile there explains "I have been cursed with a validity checker. I cannot help but question the validity of every piece of knowledge I encounter." Thanks to Brian, my validity checker was no longer a curse.

One of my independent study courses in college ten years earlier was based on the structure of knowledge in a single human mind. From tutoring students in math classes I had never taken, I noted that information that wasn't tied to some kind of foundation tended to float away. I never had any use for such "free floating" information, which made me bad at (school) history. Now that the technical and social progress of the human race fascinates me, I have a framework by which to judge and evaluate political systems and history. As an adult, my validity checker has saved me from accepting lots of government propaganda. I can only hope it inspires my three daughters in a similar manner. This is a powerful motivation for me to study and understand history so that I can explain it to them in a way that has an honest and solid foundation, and saves them from assimilating the perverted lessons that our culture teaches.

While hopping around the Internet looking for more people who might be swayed toward liberty and away from statism, I found the Campaign for Liberty. This is the organization through which Ron Paul attempted (and continues the attempt) to convert the Republican Party into a force for liberty. One of the members, Nicole Cooper, started a book club called "Campaign for Liberty Book Club", so I started visiting her house every month and a half or so, where we all met. At one of the meetings I met Aaron Brown (of Radio Free Market) and he mentioned VOLUNTARYIST.COM as something that sounded like me. I checked it out, and, sure enough, it's spot on.

If you have a validity checker too, you may be wondering about my interest in the Campaign for Liberty, since it is connected to electoral politics. My support existed because the effects of political power disturbed me more than the existence of political power. I have become less sensitive to those effects and more concerned about their source. I support the things Ron Paul says, but I don't support the repeal of bad laws. What he explains is that they are bad laws, and he concludes that they should be repealed. I agree that they are bad, but I conclude that we should ignore them. GEORGE SMITH'S ESSAY, PARTY DIALOG, re-awakened this strategy of ignoring and encouraging others to ignore bad law, rather than playing the political game. While getting them repealed is a safe way to avoid being punished for ignoring them, it's wasteful and inefficient, and it allows the pretense that legislation is respectable to continue. It's simply easier to ignore them and protect myself from those who attempt to enforce them.

Drone Fun

A Drone Dude Story, 29Mar23

"Susie, when did you get your first drone?", Zach asked.

"It was a present from mom on my tenth birthday. A simple little one. It was my favorite toy, until I saved enough to buy a better one a couple of years later." Susie replied. "What about you?"

"Wow! Wish my mom had got me one that long ago. She and dad don't like electronic toys, especially video games. Hell, we never even had a TV. Three years ago, some of my thirteenth birthday money was spent on a pretty nice one from Walmart. At least it seemed pretty nice then, with a camera and a nice controller. We sure build 'em a lot better now, huh."

"Yep, we were in that robot club then. Didn't realize your parents felt that way about electronics. You're quite the rebel Zach. That's probably why we hit it off so well."

"I had a lot of catching up to do. You're a great teacher. We've come a long way", he said, looking at their latest creation.

"I think we're pretty good at these things now. It's hard to believe we built this one entirely from scratch. You even 3-d printed a lot of stuff we had to buy before," she said while turning to give him a peck on the cheek.

"We couldn't have done it without your knack for electronics. You were even good at that back in robotics where we both learned to code," still feeling her kiss.

"Coding together is the best. I find your bugs and you find mine. Teamwork!", leaning into him a bit.

"Yeah! You 'n me, drone partners."

"I like the sound of that. Especially since we can't tell anyone else about this one, or what we've done with it. Even so, Zach, your idea for the paint can was brilliant."

"It kinda came from my parents, believe it or not. They really hate very few things, but made a serious exception for this. Suppose it was about par for them. They kept going on and on about all of the different traffic cameras and how we were being constantly being watched and monitored. Learned a lot about that from them, but they didn't seem to have any solutions."

"Funny how their dislike of electronics led us to our most advanced electronic device yet. Paint drone is so cool. Glad you came up with PD for the name, so we can mention it without others knowing what we're talking about," she said with a laugh.

"Just our little secret. PD's first mission was amazing. Couldn't believe it went so smooth, and fast, even for a little town with only six lights."

"With four cameras at each intersection, we painted 24 cameras in just over an hour. Not bad Zach. I thought it would take twice that long. You're a Jedi flying that thing."

"Couldn't have done it without my co-pilot reporting on the telemetry and activating the spray, so I was able to focus entirely on flying. That made it easy, and gave me confidence, which is probably why I asked if you would be my girlfriend that night."

"Yep, that was a special night I won't forget. Although, brainstorming improvements for PD and our next mission probably isn't what most girls would have wanted to do after that," she giggled.

Zach blushed a bit, "we came up with some good stuff. Especially, taking PD apart and wiping fingerprints off everything, just in case it gets captured. Making the list of cameras that needed painting was fun. Plate readers on the turnpike entrances, speed cams, the 5G pole cams and any others along the road. We decided to go out and make a map of all of them, with GPS coordinates."

"That kept us busy for a few weeks. I had no idea there were so many in this little town of 17,000 people. That other strange looking thing on the 5G poles downtown, which turned out to be a puke ray light, went straight to the top of the list. Cameras are bad enough, but that's an actual weapon!" she scorned.

"Yeah, those had to go as soon as we could wipe down PD inside and out, plus make sure there wasn't any hardware or code traceable to us. It started to feel more like being part of the resistance when we started taking out their weapons. We decided to launch and land in different places, also follow completely different mission paths. No similarity in timing. Coming up with all that was fun," Zach chuckled.

"Staying focused on one type of target the first time, then switching to everything in a small area the next was a good idea too. Anything to be unexpected. You would think we were some kind of professionals. Just a young couple walking the back streets at night, stealing a kiss when anyone looked our way. Funny how that makes people ignore us," kissing him again.

"Oh yeah. And the thermal shielding was brilliant. We came up with that after you asked about being observed from above, in spite of being flat black. A little spray foam insulation and loose fitting, blackened space blanket material made the motor heat nearly invisible from above, and the sides."

"Zach, we sure did a lot of PD upgrades before that second mission. All the news reports and people talking about the painted traffic light cams made me a little nervous. By the time we flew again, my nerves were calm. It was so cool knowing we were taking out actual puke ray weapons intended for use against us."

"After waiting weeks between the first two missions, the third was just a couple of days later, taking out a lot of cams over on the west side. A week later, the east side of town. The cam painting mystery was all over the local news, probably because it was obvious with so many cameras being repaired along Main Street. Then they reported running out of cam lens replacements. That was so funny! We logged the camera repairs for mop-up missions, which might be getting more risky."

Susie added, "that's when we thought of the police car cams."

"Yep, we were stumped by that for a few days. Then you came up with the solution after asking what they do most with them. Plate reading probably, to see who's in the vehicle ahead. After a moment you asked, can we paint those too? Outstanding idea!!! That's my little lady."

"That was a big mission which took some time to plan. It was amazing when others started helping. One person with a paint can could do several blocks in a single night. It happened so quickly, more than a few must have decided to join our town's secret unorganized resistance."

"Having others join the fight, and not knowing who they were, was a great feeling. A lot of people probably painted their own tags too. Who would know? It was about then we learned how bad 5G radiation is. It might even prevent us having kids," with an abrupt halt and a blush, realizing what he said.

"You found cell towers burning spectacularly in videos on the internet. Something was said about the big black bundles of antenna cables being very flammable. They were lit at the bottom, before turning up the tower. The fire burned all the way to the top, and also back into the little electronics building, causing about a half million dollars in damage to each. No easy fix. That hatched our next drone plan, BD, burner drone, with major improvements. We repositioned the spray can to not burn the drone. A second camera was added for aiming so the spray could be angled downward some, instead of straight ahead. We changed to a much more flammable spray and added an igniter."

"Susie, I couldn't believe you had so much saved from your odd jobs and wanted to spend it that way."

"I was just thinking of protecting us from 5G harm and the fun we would have together building it. We had her done in a couple of months. During that time, we did a couple of mop-up operations with PD. The government people must have been really pissed to see all their spare parts consumed and then gone," she said laughing.

"We came up with some good ideas for cover during our reconnaissance and flight missions too. Different clothes, head coverings, wigs, bicycles or skate boards, solo recons, talking only in whispers and changing the way we walked. Always somehow different. We need to finish making our thermal cloaks too, like the Afghan resistance, for the last part of our journey's home. Maybe we could do some thermal shield umbrellas too," she said.

"It's too bad only one nearby cell tower doesn't have 5G antennas on them. Oh well, they all had to go. At least there's still one so people have some cell coverage around town. Those nights together watching the towers burn from a long way away were the best yet."

"Was it the towers burning, or making love the first time while we watched," she whispered, snuggling up next to Zach.

"Yeah, I'll never forget that special night," he grinned.

"It's great to learn that others everywhere are now copying what we did. Without surveillance, anti-state actions are accelerating. Maybe one day, after central governments collapse and the tyranny ends, we can share PD and BD stories from the resistance. Maybe with our children."

Zach gave her a strong loving hug, proud of what they accomplished together before their seventeenth birthdays. After helping end central governments, their path ahead was unlimited and beyond imagination...

Taxation is Theft

*Taxation is Theft
War is Genocide
a Ticket is Extortion and Arresting someone is just Kidnapping them*

*Euphemisms do not change actions
Control over another cannot bring satisfaction
This system has existed for thousands of years
Now I've got a message for each of your ears*

*That paradigm is over, its time is done
We simply have to realize, we've already won
By taking responsibility for all of our actions
We withdraw support of the parasitic faction*

*In the new age of love and cooperation
We create systems based on decentralization
My life is truly blessed, it needs no exaggeration
All that is supports us when we work for liberation*

*So go forth and shine your light each day and be sure to find some time to pray
It isn't just about dogma and religion but being thankful for all that's in your vision*

*You are a creator, you are one with Source
Everything you could want, it's already yours Unlearn your conditioning and integrate your trauma
and life will cease to be a constant flow of drama*

*If you just change yourself, you've already changed the world
Step into your truth, and let your potential unfurl
I'm going to keep being me, it's the only thing to do and I'm so thankful for each and every one of you*

What is this “Great Awakening” All About? Some perspective...

By Brain Coffey

What we have been witnessing the last several years, and even longer for some us, is a profoundly positive change in progress on this planet (although it may not seem like it sometimes) and it is ramping up every day! It may not appear that way for some while others see the Light and continue to move forward on their respective missions in this lifetime. We are watching a changing of the “old guard” in society, governmental control, the financial economy, and even in the global spiritual institutions. Most of all, we are given the gift of witnessing the changing in ourselves. As within, so without...

During the last several years there has been a barrage of news stories, revelations, disclosures, observations, and what appears to be a massive transition in belief systems. I believe the majority of the planet has started to question everything they have been seeing. It reminds me of the movie The Truman Show, where Truman (played by Jim Carrey) starts to notice the “patterns” of his little town that seem strangely “planned.” In the end, he realizes he was on a movie set the entire time. Sometimes the Truth is stranger than fiction. This realization for some is not happening overnight, although it is certainly moving forward. There will be those in humanity who want to cling to their old beliefs and the collective structure they have been conditioned to think is for their highest good, which is the individual choice of sovereign free-will each of us always has. Some are making the choice of opening up their minds to brand new realities, which is quite exciting! One of the greatest Universal Laws is that of non-interference, meaning everyone has the privilege to decide for themselves what they want their reality to be. A question that has come up for quite some time for me is how do we serve and share knowledge, with those who are willing to break out of their limiting belief systems in a productive and effective way?

Many of us have been through serious adversity for speaking our respective Truth. There has been suffering, judgement, criticism, and some pretty significant hardship. In some cases, it has turned the lives of those standing in courage completely upside down. This has been going on for centuries to those who stood up and questioned authority, the system, and anyone involved in the corrupt system of the Matrix. It has not been an easy journey for those in the freedom movement, although worth every second. Some have left, others have continued to move forward not relenting in what they believe to be right, the sovereignty of each individual and society in general. How are we transmuting all this in ourselves? Those who are highly sensitive to energies are going through some of the most challenging of times right now. I have witnessed this in others and felt it myself. We are absorbing many light frequencies and unearthing a lot of healing in ourselves and sometimes triggering others to do the same just from our presence. It can be a lot to hold and certainly an admirable endeavor.

In my own experience I have learned a tremendous amount about myself and others. There have been difficulties that I have went through which also helped me bloom into a different version of myself. This path has been empowering and humbling to say the least. We are all entering a time for serious internal and collective healing. Dropping resentments, bringing about forgiveness, understanding and compassion to those in our lives and most of all, ourselves, is paramount right now. We are the lighthouses for many, and for this New Earth moving forward. Being authentic in everything we do even when it may not be popular to do so. It sets an example for all those around us. There has been a unification of citizens around the country from different political belief systems, cultures, and backgrounds who are making a huge difference every day. Communities around the country are starting to open their eyes, even those who may have been hypnotized by the false reality Matrix all of their lives, up until this point. This has catalyzed the first step towards collaboration and cooperation on a very wide scale.

Breaking through the threshold takes resilience, determination, and strength. Humanity is currently at the threshold. For those familiar with the story of Chuck Yeager, the first man to break the sound barrier, he shared his experience of what it was like when he broke this threshold for humanity. In his interview decades later, he explained the day he went up into the plane for the final attempt to achieve something no one the planet had done before. As the plane sped up, he felt it shaking and almost coming apart. Many had tried to break the sound barrier unsuccessfully, and some even lost their life doing it. He recalls hearing a loud boom and thinking he had died at the time. His account of what happened next is quite astounding. He had entered a peaceful state with no resistance and began floating through the air. What finally made him realize he was not only alive, but accomplished what he set out to do, was the cheering on the radio! The plane had stopped shaking and the aircraft was peacefully gliding through the sky. The moral of the story, the more challenging and chaotic things got for his plane, the closer he was to breaking through the threshold until he did it with grace and ease...I firmly believe this is what many of us are about to also experience, once we finally break through this energetic threshold of this new reality we are on the cusp of achieving! After Chuck broke the sound barrier, others also began to do it. The limited belief of what humanity could accomplish had expanded and gave others the confidence to achieve it as well.

In many freedom communities around the world there are new systems being birthed! Thresholds are being broken. This is the MOST exciting time to be alive, even in the shadows of difficulty and shocking disclosures the collective is seeing play out. If we are to be the beacons of Light for humanity, how are we transmuting our own shadows and fears to heal ourselves through this? It is easy to get discouraged on this journey. No doubt about it. With the massive amounts of frequency upgrades occurring through the plasmic wave changes, solar flares, and spiking of the Schumann Resonance; how are we using the current energies on this planet for own personal emotional and spiritual growth...in service to others, and traversing through the threshold? To be an example for others courageous enough to do it, fully. Just like Chuck did, we are about to accomplish something the world has never seen, inspiring an entire planet to do the same.

The best is certainly yet to come, and the Awakening is unstoppable...

Spiritual Anarchy

by Corey Haag

The term Anarchy today has been given a black eye just as Conspiracy Theorist has. To be a critical thinker, and examiner of details related to events that may have an impact on us as individuals and as a society is to be a pariah in today's USSA. To be intelligent and self-sufficient is to be a terrorist. To be free is to be dangerous. The twisting of our language and our perception of what is Right or normal or moral is the essence of the degeneration we are seeing in our society. Interestingly, it is this degeneration that is making it possible for vast numbers of people to awaken to the truth as they become less willing to participate in an increasingly corrupted and sick society. It is the polarities becoming clearer.

As more people become aware that they have been absorbed by a sickness, the more people are seeking truth and answers to questions they never considered before, such as, “is my government working for my benefit, truly?” Its at this point that they become the conspiracy theorist in the family or neighborhood. It is at this point that they begin to understand what Anarchy truly means. Free association. Self-determinism. Sovereignty. This process is the same process that a person undergoes when having a spiritual awakening. This is why I call it Spiritual Anarchy. It is the process of becoming a living, breathing, thinking, flesh and blood Man. It is this process that we are seeing today, in lesser or greater extent, amongst the population of not only the USSA, but the entire world. Stay True Freedom Fighters!

Act in Freedom

There is a fascinating story about Linda Tannehill, one of the authors of The Market for Liberty. One day Tannehill decided to stop writing about liberty and live it instead. She set off, hitchhiking around those United States, making handicrafts, and selling them on the side of the road. For those who dare to think about her example, it might stay stinging in the mind, asking us what might be the proper use of liberty, and how an individual might enact it.

Our esteemed colleague Kenny Palurintano has a comparable story about leaving town with only $200 in his pocket, not knowing quite where he was going or how he would find a meal or a place to sleep two weeks hence. When I first interviewed Kenny in 2015, I asked about the courage it must have taken to make such a bold move with his life. He said that, on the contrary, it seemed quite natural. His thought process went something like, "What's the worst that could happen? I might go hungry. I have gone hungry before. So, let's see what happens."

People asked me similar things when I left Australia to travel and live in Latin America, and again when I left the city to live here on Rancho Cicada, 40 minutes from the nearest village. It seemed to me that the decisions were simple. The foundations for my actions had surely been laid many years before, in acts that have long since been forgotten by most, and mostly forgotten even by me.

For example, one of the first times I got up to sing karaoke in my hometown, I requested the Folsom Prison Blues, and started a couple of measures late, leading me to sing every single note of the song incorrectly. Or the time I approached some strangers to practice my Portuguese, only to later realise that I had actually overheard them speaking Italian.

Those small moments could easily go uncelebrated, or even appear as shameful failures. God willing, with years we go on to make grander achievements that the world might honor. With tender awareness we can recall those moments of true courage, the moments that led us to many wonderful adventures, that made us who we are today. To pause and be curious about them, we might find ourselves moved, knowing that the heart of the one who took those right actions still beats within us. One can be grateful.

My fellow Australian Rich Simpson escaped our native land during the height of the pandemic. At the time people told him it was impossible, that there was no way to leave. Even on the other side of the world, I got word that if you arrived at Sydney airport with your ticket in hand, they would surely tell you that the flight had been cancelled. When Rich arrived in Mexico and posted it on social media, his friends back home still refused to believe him until he posted a live video.

As the saying goes, "those who say it can't be done, shouldn't interrupt those who are doing it." Despite so many protests, liberty is there for the taking.

In Atomic Habits, James Clear tells us that by creating a small habit we can begin to change our identity. For example, say I want to become a runner. I start a small habit – putting on my running shoes and taking them off again. After a few days of this, I think I may as well run around the block a few times. A small action, done over time, is enough to change how we perceive ourselves, and that can be enough to provoke a life-long change.

In some form there is a scriptural precedent, in the venerated Lotus Sutra, the sacred text of Mahayana Buddhism. In the second chapter, Lord Buddha explains, in detail, that a person of distracted mind might gaze upon an image of the Buddha and give the slightest offering, such as a nod of the head or wave. "In time he would come to see countless Buddhas," says the Tathagata.

By the authority of the wisdom of Lord Buddha, a single gesture of respect for sacred things can change our destinies – not just over a single lifetime, but over multiple lifetimes. One action, just barely in the right direction, and barely correct in method, can be that powerful.

Many libertarians have spent countless hours debating the philosophy of a free society, and many anarchists have spent many days wondering what an ideal world might look like, and I of course am among them. But we needn't wait for a free society to give life to our visions. Within us there is a precious idea, perhaps something that is entirely new, or perhaps something lying dormant, something so old that we had almost forgotten. With a single step that mustard seed is planted, and no human can say how far it might spread.

Let the heart awaken; let the hand be moved.

As this paper is being printed we find ourselves in a fascinating node in 'history'. With an actively waging war on the very psyche of our collective mythos, it's time now more than ever to harness the raw elements of culture, and nourish them with love and intention as we archive the movement.

It's time more than ever to write our own story, or someone else will write it for us, and they'll be wrong.

We need to keep making records. Keep expressing the sentiment of the times from our unique lense. Through music, visionary art, dance, and ritual we find ways to cope with reality. We find community. It gives us meaning. It helps us stay sane.

This is why the elements of Hip Hop are so important to me.

They symbolize ways to cope with the suffering that seems to be a necessary component for evolution on this current timeline. Through Breakin', Emceein', Graffiti Art, DJin', Beatboxin', Street Fashion, Street Language, Street Knowledge, and Street Entrepreneurialism, we find outlets for personal expression. We find ways out of unnecessary suffering.

We finally find the freedom to channel our energy into something healthy and benefits not only ourselves but the world around us. This is what inspires me to keep living. This is what lights me up inside.

I'm Emily Ra and I'm a Witch Hop artist.

I craft my energy and intentional spells into classic boom bap 90's Hip Hop beats with droning world instruments and soaring vocals. I've studied extensively with the Temple of Hip Hop as well as the Temple of Isis, and now I'm Man-made Microwave Radiation is the most pervasive, invasive, and dangerous disease-causing agent in the world today. Radisafe has been tested and proven to reduce by 99.95% the amount of radiation being absorbed into the body. In the U.S. these tests were done at CIEMS in California. Anarchism is not a romantic fable but the hardheaded realization, based on five thousand years of experience, that we cannot entrust the management of our lives to kings, priests, politicians, generals, and county commissioners."

— Edward Abbey
